Magic gone from airport

BY MARY G. SEILEY
Poof: The Magic is gone from Stennis International Airport. It popped up in Gulfport.

Those Casino Magic gambling junket flights that led to a boom at Stennis -- and prompted revitalization of the airport -- disappeared last month when Express One's charter service went into bankruptcy.

Airport officials were hopeful Casino Magic would replace that program with another one, using Stennis facilities.

But Magic officials replaced Express One with service through Casino Airlink, a charter company that uses the Gulfport-Biloxi Regional Airport as its local hub. And there are no plans to resume charter flights using Stennis, says Magic's vice president of marketing, Pat Stevenson.

Stevenson said Casino

Airlink operates independently of Magic, and delivers gamblers to other casinos in the area as well. The company may fly in patrons for Casino Magic in Bay St. Louis, and use the same plane to take patrons home from another casino, Stevenson said.

Dropping Stennis from Casino Magic's plans, said Stevenson, has nothing to do with the quality of the Stennis airport or its personnel. It does make good economic sense for Casino Airlink, Stevenson added, but the choice is Airlink's alone.

Bill Stovall, who oversees operations at Stennis for the Port and Harbor Commission, expressed surprise and disappointment at the development. He agreed with Stevenson, however, that Casino Airlink's arrangements with other cas-

Welcoming the Air Force

Stennis International Airport Director Bill Stovall welcomes Captain Mark Kuras (left) and Major Mike Hicks to Stennis. The Air Force announced it will use Stennis to train pilots in its C-Series planes. The Coast Guard is already using Stennis for training of its helicopter and small aircraft pilots. Stovall said that although the airport would receive no direct financial benefit, the increased air traffic and the Air Force's specific needs will help in garnering additional funding from the FAA. Major Kuras said Stennis is an ideal training location because of the airport's light air traffic. "We can do the same approach a few times and have the pilots work on it," he said. Major Kuras said heavy air traffic at Gulfport/Biloxi Regional and Moisant International airports makes practicing approaches and landings much more difficult. (Echo staff photo by Richard Meek)

Chamber, T&G reach tourism accord

BY RICHARD MEEK

The Hancock County Chamber of Commerce and the Tourism and Gaming Commission have joined forces to form the Tourism Development Bureau, with the common goal of fostering tourism for the county.

At a joint news conference Tuesday, officials from both parties expressed optimism over the agreement.

"We will have a director 100 percent focused on tourism," said T&G President Waveland Resort Inn co-owner Bill Lady, who added he hopes the bureau is in place before the end of the year.

"This is a unique locale," Lady said. "It is a nice quiet community, in between Harrison County and new Orleans, where there is a lot of action."

The newly-formed bureau shall be governed by a separate Tourism Board of Directors (approximately three to nine members), selected from the Chamber membership and

Bed and breakfast will be opposed

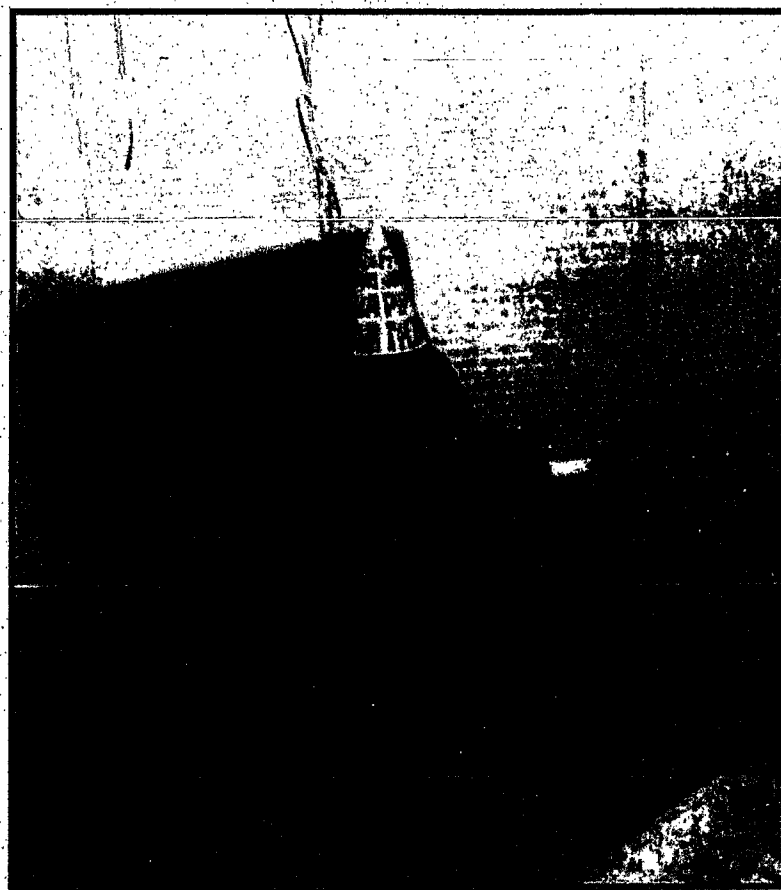

BY MARY G. SEILEY
Plans to convert the main house at Camp Onward into a bed and breakfast inn are up for action at an Aug. 2 Planning and Zoning Commission meeting.

As with a series of previous development proposals for the Beach Boulevard property, the latest plan is expected to draw hot opposition.

"Please do not destroy such a great residential area," says one opponent, Robert Breeden Jr., in a letter to city officials. Breeden says he has his own plans for creating a residential subdivision in a neighboring 12-acre tract he owns.

Camp Onward, at 972 Beach Boulevard, has been in the news repeatedly in recent years as various proposals for development have been made. Several years ago, plans to reactivate the camp as a "retreat" facility drew heated controversy, and City Council rejected the proposal.

Celebrating milestone

Mary G. Lashore celebrated her 105th birthday at Dixie Whitehouse Nursing Home in Pass Christian. She was born July 17, 1890, in Dallas County, Alabama. She lived in Alabama until 1991 when she moved to Gulfport to live with her niece, Ann Mae Taylor. Lashore is presently a resident of the Dixie Whitehouse Nursing Home. Lashore was married and her only child was killed in action during World War II. Willard Scott of NBC wished her a happy birthday on the Today Show. (Echo staff photo by Richard Meek)

Hope Haven finds house

BY MARY G. SEILEY
With a "fixer-upper" house under contract to purchase, officials of Hope Haven plan to make an immediate push for appropriations from city and Hancock County officials.

"We're going to the county and Waveland and Bay St. Louis begging," said Mary Woodson, one of the founders of the non-profit Hope Haven organization. "They can't tell me anything is more important than this -- I won't listen," said Woodson on Tuesday.

Hope Haven is a volunteer organization, which has been raising money to found a shelter for abused and neglected children. While the group has raised $25,000 so far, it still needs more cash, volunteers and donations to get the program off the ground.

Woodson said Hope Haven plans to start work Aug. 1 to convert a three-bedroom house into suitable accommodations for children.

As it stands, Hancock County has no facility to house youths who are taken from their homes by social workers.

The children are placed in shelter facilities throughout Mississippi, and in Alabama and Florida, said Woodson. Some have been housed as far away as Tennessee, she added.

"They just move children back and forth like a basketball," she said. "...Our children are getting shipped out like dirty laundry."

Last month, officials of a shelter in Forrest County told the Hancock County Board of Supervisors the majority of children in their facility come from Hancock County. They asked for a $15,000 appropriation to help foot the bill for their facility's operation.

Woodson said she can understand that request, since the facility is caring for Hancock County youths. But, she added, it would make a lot more sense to appropriate money to start a local shelter.

Hope Haven officials say the records show that some 547 youths were placed in emergency housing between January, 1993 and August 1994.

Bay depot bids opened

BY MARY G. SEILEY

Bids for the restoration of the Bay St. Louis depot were opened Wednesday, culminating more than two years' planning for the project.

Bay St. Louis city officials are expected to take action on the bids in a meeting next month.

Officials have planned on spending some $868,000 to renovate and restore the train depot and grounds, using a federal transportation grant and city funds.

When complete, the 1928 depot will serve as a hub for public and private transit services, civic functions, and a genealogical library.

The two-story Spanish Colonial Revival-style depot on Railroad Avenue is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, and is an official Mississippi Landmark. Plans for its restoration have been closely scrutinized by state historic preservation officials.

Its five-acre grounds will be landscaped during the project, which is hoped to serve as a major stimulus to business in the area.

IN CONGRESS

By Rep. Gene Taylor

The time is now to stem the tide of illegal immigration

States throughout the country, such as California, Arizona and Florida, have become hard pressed to find the resources needed to cope with a growing trend of illegal immigration.

To compound the problem, Congress has been slow to change immigration policy that is unable to keep up with the problems associated with a dysfunctional immigration system.

Through inaction, Congress has sent a message to all interested in crossing our borders illegally that our borders are insecure and we have an infinite supply of public assistance. This perception must be changed.

During the 1990's the U.S. is experiencing unprecedented levels of legal immigration. Fifteen million new immigrants are expected by the end of the decade. While Liberty's bright torch has lighted the way for many seeking safe haven from oppression or a better way of life, illegal immigration deals an unfair hand to those legitimate refugees who waited patiently, sometimes 10 years, to immigrate to America.

At a time when our nation is trying to balance its budget and reform the welfare system, public assistance and services for all immigrants in 1993 was more than $10 billion.

It is my belief that illegal immigration is unfair to all Americans and those legal immigrants who are working hard to become American citizens.

That is why I have cosponsored a bill by Rep. Bob Stump of Arizona that will hopefully rectify our nation's illegal immigration crisis.

The bill goes to the heart of the illegal immigration crisis by prohibiting the payment of federal benefits to illegals and ending the practice of conferring citizenship on the children of illegal aliens.

In addition, the bill would strengthen our often abused asylum system by providing prompt exclusion of those who attempt to defraud the system.

Finally, the bill calls for a significant increase in the border patrol. By increasing our border security and eliminating these compelling illegal immigration incentives, I am convinced we can turn the tide of illegal immigration.

Spending approved for water projects

From a flood prevention study along the coastal counties to a multi-million dollar dredging project at the Port of Pascagoula, south Mississippi is set to receive $9.2 million to improve the state's future prosperity, announced Rep. Gene Taylor.

The U.S. House of Representatives overwhelmingly approved the Fiscal Year 1996 Energy and Water Development Appropriations Bill (H.R. 1905). The measure will be sent to the Senate for consideration.

Taylor, who has pushed to see that the programs were funded, said the bill would pay for a multitude of projects up and down the Gulf Coast.

A large percentage of the funds appropriated for the Coast will be directed toward port and harbor dredging projects. Taylor said he was pleased the bill included the remaining funds for Phase I of the Port of Pascagoula's Channel and Harbor Deep Draft Navigation Project.

"One of the largest needs we have along the Gulf Coast is getting Pascagoula's channel and harbor dredged," said Taylor, who initiated the project in the House. "This project should greatly enhance the port's operation and safety, thereby increasing commerce at the facility."

Pascagoula's Deep Draft Navigation Project received $2.8 million, while an additional $3 million was allocated for routing maintenance dredging of the channel.

Flooding problems in Harrison, Hancock and Jackson counties will also be addressed. The Army Corps of Engineers will conduct a $62,000 study to find solutions for those residents of the tri-county area who experience major flooding during heavy downpours.

The bill also sets aside $2.9 million for the operation and maintenance of the Gulfport Harbor. Biloxi Harbor gets $461,000 for its routine operation and maintenance dredging efforts.

THE ABILITY TO STOP CHILD ABUSE IS NOW IN ALL OUR HANDS.

For years, child abuse has been a problem to which there were few real answers. But now there's an innovative new program that can help stop the abuse before it starts. A program that reaches new parents early on, teaching them how to cope with the stresses that lead to abuse. It's already achieving unprecedented results. So call 1-800-CHILDREN today. Because only with your help can we keep child abuse from touching the children being born today.

THE MORE YOU HELP THE LESS THEY HURT.

Cochran announces funding for energy and water projects

The Senate Energy and Water Development Appropriations Subcommittee approved nearly $100 million for projects which will help Mississippi, Senator Thad Cochran announced.

"These projects are extremely important to the economic development of our state, and I am delighted the Energy and Water Subcommittee has supported funding for them," said Cochran.

The energy and water bill includes:

- Funding for flood control construction projects, including $30 million for Mississippi River levees and $47.9 for construction in the Yazoo River Basin.
- $9.7 million for operations and maintenance of harbors and ports in Mississippi, including Okatibbee Lake near Meridian and the harbors of Biloxi, Gulfport, Pascagoula and Rosedale.

ing Okatibbee Lake near Meridian and the harbors of Biloxi, Gulfport, Pascagoula and Rosedale.

• $7.5 million for construction projects on the Tenn-Tom Waterway and at the Pascagoula Harbor.

The subcommittee also approved $182 million for the continued operation of the Appalachian Regional Commission as well as operating funds for the Tennessee Valley Authority.

The Senate Appropriations Committee is expected to act on the bill later this week. Cochran serves on the Appropriations Subcommittee on Energy and Water Development and is the third-ranking Republican on the 28-member full Appropriations Committee.

FROM THE SENATE

By Senator Trent Lott

The importance of a national rail system

The concept that travelers would be able to go from coast to coast on a national rail passenger system was Congress' original vision in creating the National Railroad Passenger Corporation which we know as Amtrak.

Unfortunately in the years since its creation, Amtrak has become so micro-managed by Congress and the federal bureaucracy that it does not have the flexibility to operate efficiently and on a business-like basis. Congress has attached strings to Amtrak's operations which have restricted and complicated its labor relations, made arbitrary routing decisions, and resulted in disproportionate funding for the commuter rail in the northeast corridor at the expense of the whole system.

As a result, Amtrak over the next five years will be facing a $2.5 billion operating deficit. In the absence of any reforms to its operation, it either will have to curtail the very service it needs to continue to prosper or cease operations altogether.

One of my first priorities as the chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Surface Transportation and Merchant Marine has been to write a legislative proposal to get Amtrak back on its feet and give it the flexibility to operate as much as possible like a private business.

At the same time, I want to eliminate Amtrak's need for federal operating subsidies by the end of five years, an action which will bring it into compliance with the recently-passed blueprint to balance the federal budget.

At the request of myself and Senator Larry Pressler, chairman of the Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee, Amtrak President Thomas

Downs earlier this year sponsored a coast-to-coast series of regional forums with local residents, transportation experts and local leaders to address comprehensive, long-term reform of Amtrak. The resulting recommendations form the core of the bill I soon will be introducing.

To put Amtrak on the right track for the 21st Century, Congress first must modify or eliminate legislative restrictions that do not apply to businesses other than Amtrak. We need to remove outdated rules which impede Amtrak's labor relations.

Congress must allow Amtrak to invest to maximize revenues and services and to enter into commercial diversification such as selling advertising on trains as a means of finding new revenues. We need to encourage private sector intermodal cooperation to find ways to combine bus service, air service and mass transit with Amtrak operations.

One step the Senate already has taken to assist Amtrak is an amendment to the national highway bill which gives states the flexibility to use federal surface transportation funds for inter-city passenger rail services within their borders.

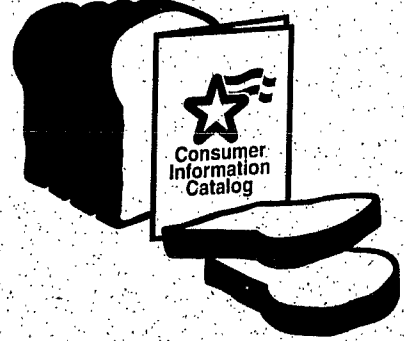

Amtrak contends that it is given the maximum flexibility to make labor and procurement reforms, to operate like a private business, and to diversify its operations, it will have an operating balance within five years and no longer need federal subsidies.

My legislation is intended to facilitate that flexibility, but it does contain a trigger mechanism to automatically privatize Amtrak in the event it does not meet its operating targets.

An efficient rail passenger system is a key component of our national transportation system. For Mississippi, Amtrak links the rest of the nation are critical to our tourism industry, to municipal and regional economies, and the needs of individuals in going from place to place.

The lack of a major airline hub in the state makes Amtrak all the more important. A national rail passenger service that links Mississippi to New England to the Pacific Northwest can only maximize our economic opportunities and growth.

Can You Find The Drug Dealer In This Picture?

You live in a nice middle-class neighborhood. You don't see drug dealers on the corner. Your kids are only in grade school. Why worry? Because drug dealers don't necessarily look like the ones on television. In fact, studies show that your kids are more likely to be pushed into using drugs by someone their own age - someone they think is their friend.

So tell your children that anyone who offers them drugs is not a friend. Next, be an informed parent. Call 1-800-624-0100 and ask for a free booklet called Growing Up Drug-Free - A Parent's Guide To Prevention. Then - and this is really important - get to know your kids' friends. And their parents. Because with you in the picture, chances are a drug dealer won't be.

REFLECTIONS ON LIFE

By Father Jerome LeDoux, SVD

When your day-to-day business as well as whatever dirty laundry you have in your life have been gossiped about by someone close to you and have subsequently hit the street, you have the overwhelming feeling of evil pressing you.

Worse, when something personal and intimate which you said in greatest confidence to someone you thought you could trust has been repeated to one who broadcast it to the world, you feel the trauma and pain of betrayal suffocating you.

Especially galling because of its intimate nature, this ugly reality is all the more disturbing because it is so widespread. Woe to us all, that it is so very difficult to find a trustworthy confidant with truly sealed lips.

When this disgusting, extremely disturbing experience has happened not just once or twice but repeatedly and over a long span of time, you feel the crushing weight of evil rapidly creating within you a skeptical wall of distrust.

"Do not be conquered by evil, but conquer evil with good" (Rom. 12:21), Paul admonishes you in the face of a distrust which can easily deteriorate into cynicism. Insist on doing what is good, no matter how sorely evil afflicts you.

Repay evil with good always, even if you feel constrained to agree with the Mafia slogan: "Three people can keep a secret if two of them are dead."

Betrayal of confidentiality, right to privacy and reputation are often tied into other whole-sale outrages and betrayals such as conjugal infidelity, abuse and scorn. Again, the mantle of evil in the world is widespread and suffocating.

Spouses, as everyone else, should to what they must to protect themselves from physical, emotional and spiritual harm. Yet, Paul insists, "Conquer evil with good."

Your sense of evil is bad and steadily getting worse, as you witness families disintegrating because of selfishness which prevents husband and wife from becoming one. Thus, children can never be one with the parents and each other.

"Do not be conquered by evil," Paul reminds you when your sensibilities are offended by the gross conduct of family members who ignore the living most of the time but rush in to claim the spoils almost before a relative passes away.

Wherever the corpse is, there the vultures will gather" (Mt. 24:28), Jesus assures us. In his inimitable way, Jesus takes the realities of nature and shows how they fit eerily into the most personal and intimate of human relations.

Before a poor body is cold, at times before it is dead, evil baffles and strangles us as unfeeling, greedy relatives move in with more ruthless abandon than the Goths and Vandals, seizing all that no one else grabs first.

Still, in the face of it, Paul urges, "Overcome evil with good." Take the same high road Jesus took in repaying all evil with good, even to the point of giving his life for all.

Much more than by global greed, hatred and murder, we feel devastated by evil in our children who live in the valueless darkness of drugs, violence and immorality because they are simply following the faithless footsteps of their elders.

Therein lies the problem and Overcome evil with good

therein lies our hope. We can help turn our children around if we turn ourselves around by constantly overcoming evil with the good we say and do.

The roots of most American music originated in the Deep South along the banks of the Mississippi. Country music, the Blues and Jazz all have roots that stem from Mississippi artists and musicians. One of the earliest forms of American music was Ragtime, which stemmed from a blending of African American, Caribbean and folk music. This spring the first concert featuring southern Ragtime music was held on the campus of Mississippi State University.

Noted Ragtime musician Richard Zimmerman has played and conducted Ragtime music around the world. He was joined in concert by the Eteteras String Band.

Corps of Engineers to evaluate Pearl River

Low flows that have historically caused concern for residents along the Pearl River and Holmes Bayou will be investigated by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

The Corps' Vicksburg District will determine whether wetland restoration in the Walkiah Bluff area is a feasible undertaking.

As part of the $750,000 effort, the Corps will conduct an environmental scoping meeting in Picaune July 31 to gather information in preparing an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS).

Beginning at 7 p.m. in the Corner Stone Banquet Room, the public will have the opportunity to "get in on the ground floor" and provide valuable input to the Corps.

"This meeting is about trying to better define what we need to look at in the EIS," said Gary Young, Corps biologist. "The best way to do that is to talk to the people who live here. They are able to identify issues we might overlook because they are familiar with the area."

The low-flow problem has developed naturally over the years as flows of the Pearl River have chosen the shortest route to join the West Pearl River. Stagnant water conditions have produced such undesirable results as fish and mussel kills and poor water quality.

"Water that has traditionally flowed down the Pearl River is now flowing down Wilson Slough," said Greg Ruff, technical manager. "Wilson Slough has widened and captured more of the flow, and this has created low-flow problems, particularly in the Walkiah Bluff area."

"The State of Mississippi has asked us to look at a solution to this problem," said Ruff. "Under new Corps policies regarding wetland restoration, we are able to look at alternatives to restore the ecosystem in this area."

"One thing that is unique is our having an environmental agency, the Mississippi Department of Environmental Quality, as the local sponsor," said Young. "They're in on everything, and we're working closely with them. We're also coordinating with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service like we normally do."

Costs are being shared 75 percent Federal and 25 percent non-Federal, Young explained.

"A long-term problem we see is the possibility of an 18-mile reach of the Pearl River with no flow and subsequent adverse impacts to adjacent wetlands if Wilson Slough continues to capture more of the flow," Ruff said.

"We'll consider various closures and overflow structures to direct more flow around the Walkiah Bluff area," Ruff said. "We also might look at a minor amount of dredging to develop a pilot channel for the restoration of low flows."

Ruff said the first product will be a detailed project report to be submitted to Corps Headquarters in Washington, D.C., for approval.

Upon approval of a favorable report and completion of National Environmental Policy Act documentation, the Corps would proceed with plans and specifications for construction.

"The lower Pearl River Basin is one of the few remaining unique wetland areas," Young said. "It's one of the higher value wetland areas in the United States."

Threatened species that potentially exist in the study area include the gulf sturgeon, the ringed sawback turtle and the inflated heel splitter mussel.

Ruff said this effort is totally separate from the Corps' West Pearl River Navigation Project and any features built would not impact flows on the West Pearl.

"The same amount of water would enter the West Pearl," Ruff said. "It would come from a more roundabout route."

Ruff and Young encourage the public to attend the July 31 meeting and provide their input.

"It's important to keep in mind what this meeting is about," Young said. "This provides the public an opportunity to let us know the things they think we need to consider."

Reuben Anderson joins UM faculty, filling Jamie Whitten Chair of Law

Reuben Anderson — the first African-American graduate of the University of Mississippi School of Law — will return to the Oxford campus this fall to fill the prestigious Jamie Lloyd Whitten Chair of Law and Government.

Anderson made history again in 1985 when he became the first black justice on the Mississippi Supreme Court, from which he retired in 1990.

The Jackson attorney will become the seventh holder of the Whitten Chair — which was established to honor the long-time congressman from Mississippi's 1st Congressional District.

"I'm highly honored to be a part of such an outstanding effort in education, especially to be following in the footsteps of those great Mississippians who have already served in the Whitten Chair," Anderson said. "In addition to teaching a course in alternative dispute resolution, he plans to offer his perspectives on what it takes to be successful in the legal profession."

"Obviously when I'm around young people, it's a great opportunity to try to share my experiences — including 28 years or so as a lawyer."

Dean Louis Westerfield said, "Distinguished visiting professors like Judge Anderson give our students a wonderful opportunity to learn and benefit from people who have made significant contributions to public service in our state."

"And to have the law school's first African-American graduate return as holder of this most prestigious chair is certainly significant in the history of this institution."

A graduate of Tougaloo College, Judge Anderson received his juris doctorate at the University in 1967. He was honored by Ole Miss in 1987, when he became one of six black native Mississippians to receive Awards of Distinction for outstanding records of achievement.

Anderson began his professional career as a counsel with the NAACP Legal Defense and Educational Fund Inc. He has served as a municipal judge in Jackson, county court judge in Hinds County and circuit court judge for the 7th Circuit Court District.

A native of Jackson and partner in the Phelps Dunbar law firm, Anderson is a trustee for the Mississippi Bar Foundation, the Ole Miss Alumni Association, Piney Woods Country Life, R. H. Green Foundation and Tougaloo College. He chairs the state's Rhodes Scholarship Selection Committee, as well as Books of the World committee.

Chairman of Leadership Jackson, Anderson serves as a director of BellSouth, The Kroger Company, Trustmark National Bank, Arts Alliance of Jackson, Jackson Chamber of Commerce, Mississippi Food Network and United Way Capital Area Inc., among others.

A successful drive for a million-dollar endowment begun in 1986, established Ole Miss' Jamie Lloyd Whitten Chair of Law and Government.

Former Governor William F. Winter was the inaugural holder of the Whitten Chair, followed by Joe Daniel, an attorney; Joel Blass, former Mississippi Supreme Court justice; Charles Clark, former chief judge of the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals; Evelyn Gandy, the first woman in Mississippi to hold the statewide elective offices of lieutenant governor, treasurer and insurance commissioner; and former Governor Bill Allain.

According to the IRS, the examination is held annually for persons who are tax preparers who wish to apply to become enrolled agents and licensed to practice before the IRS.

Those interested in taking the examination should get IRS Publication 1470, "Package for the Special Enrollment Examination," from the IRS office.

The package includes background and study materials and a questions and answers sample booklet.

The application fee is $55 to take all four parts of the examination and $45 for those preparers taking fewer than four parts. Applications to take the examination must be postmarked no later than July 31.

Counties collect $10.9 million from Highway Patrol citations

Mississippi counties are $10,905,837 richer from fines collected on citations issued in 1994 by troopers of the Mississippi Highway Patrol.

A computer listing completed in June shows Hinds County led the state in revenue collected from Highway Patrol-issued tickets with $594,293. Sharkey County collected the least amount with $7,577. Hancock County collected $79,144.

"Not only do troopers have the important role in their community of protecting life and property, the community benefits from their work," said Col. Jimmy Stringer, Highway Patrol director.

No portion of fines collected from patrol-issued tickets is paid to Mississippi's general fund or the Highway Patrol budget. All revenue from these fines remains in the county where the citation was given or is directed into assessment-sponsored programs. The programs include the State Law Library, Mississippi Alcohol Safety Education Program, Federal State Alcohol Program, driver education and correctional facilities.

The $10.9 million in fines from 142,610 citations issued in 1994 is more than double the $4.55 million collected in 1993.

The agency has commissioned almost 100 new troopers since December 1993. "In April 1994, we began manning Life-saver details throughout the state with the primary mission of removing drunken or drugged drivers from the highways," Stringer said. "The added manpower and stepped up enforcement program resulted in an increase in the number of tickets written."

Of the nine Highway Patrol districts, the 10-county Jackson District led the state in fine collections with $2.15 million, followed by the 10-county Batesville District with $1.48 million.

Woman suffrage commemoration features Wheeler

A University of Southern Mississippi historian is on the move as the 75th anniversary of women gaining the right to vote approaches.

Dr. Marjorie Spruill Wheeler, associate professor of history at USM, is a recognized expert on woman suffrage. She will be part of national and state events in coming months that celebrate the effort resulting in the Aug. 26 1920 passage of the 19th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution. She also has edited two books on woman suffrage due to be released by Aug. 26.

On July 27, Gov. Kirk Fordice invited women from throughout Mississippi to be present at Mississippi Educational Television studio in Jackson to watch Wheeler tape an interview on women's issues and woman suffrage, and to participate in discussion groups afterward. Wheeler was the honoree at an Old Capitol reception later that day.

Both events are part of the culmination of the governor's year-long statewide celebration of universal and comprehensive rights and responsibilities recognition.

The interview will air on ETV Aug. 26 before a rebroadcast of "One Woman, One Vote," the Educational Film Center's chronicle of the woman suffrage movement first aired in February. Wheeler appeared on the program.

On the actual weekend of the anniversary, Wheeler has been invited to take part in a two-day event at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington D.C. She will be a featured speaker during a symposium planned Aug. 25 and be on hand with women from across the nation for a reenactment of a suffrage march Aug. 26.

The two-day event in Washington includes a reception, sponsored by the United States Postal Service, at which a special edition woman suffrage stamp will be unveiled.

Wheeler also is scheduled to speak on woman suffrage at the American Political Science Association's annual meeting in Chicago Aug. 31 and at the Southern Festival of Books in Nashville in mid-October.

She will deliver the keynote address, "North Carolina Women from Suffrage to Civil Rights," at a Nov. 13 symposium sponsored by the North Carolina Museum of History.

Wheeler's new books include One Woman, One Vote, a companion edition for the EFC film by the same name, which features current scholarship on history, fills in gaps and challenges widely-accepted theories on woman suffrage.

The University of Tennessee Press will release Votes for Women! The Woman Suffrage Movement in Tennessee, The South and The Nation, a collection of essays and primary documents that include pro- and anti-suffrage materials and political cartoons. Tennessee was the 36th state to ratify the 19th Amendment to the Constitution, making it the law of the land.

Both books are expected to be released prior to Aug. 26.

Social work program delayed

The launch of a part-time master's degree program in social work based at the University of Southern Mississippi Gulf Coast has been delayed until the fall 1996.

"We had hoped to begin some course work in the fall 1995," said Dr. Earle Washington, director of USM's School of Social Work. "It appears that it will be in the best interest of all concerned to have full resources in place prior to beginning the program to avoid any false starts."

Students interested in the program are encouraged to go ahead and complete the application process now, despite the delay, Washington said.

For information, call (601) 865-4500 and ask for Hattiesburg extension 4163.

Airport

nos logically puts the service in Gulfport.

"I had a lot of hope something could be worked out," said Stovall of the Casino Magic business. He added, however, that airport officials have known for awhile they need to diversify the flight traffic at Stennis, rather than rely so heavily on Casino Magic's business.

"We have a facility that we can do a lot with. We have to find the right source," Stovall said.

Stennis had lapsed into a sleepy airfield, with years of little use, until Casino Magic opened and began flying patrons in and out of the Hancock County facility.

The sudden boom of traffic led to a multi-million dollar upgrade of the facility, financed largely through the Federal Aviation Administration. Officials resurfaced the runway, constructed a new apron, spruced up the landscaping, launched a personnel training program, and were planning more massive capital improvements.

Activity at the airport, however, slowed to a trickle when Express One went into bankruptcy. Stennis officials have responded by cutting costs with layoffs and other measures.

"We've really cut back in costs," Stovall said. "Nobody wants to shut the airport down. The airport is the catalyst for current industry and getting new industry. It won't happen overnight."

House

While seeking money from area governments, Hope Haven also plans to apply for grants to help support their effort, Woodson said.

Meanwhile, the group is urging donations of lumber, paint, flooring materials and household furnishings such as bunkbeds linens and cookware.

Donations may be made by contacting Woodson at Carole's Olde Town Restaurant on Main Street, or Felecia Palmer, at 467-7773.

Once the shelter is open, it will operate largely with volunteer help, although a full-time staff will be required as well.

Bed

City officials did agree earlier this year to subdivide the 10.8-acre tract, between Beach Boulevard and Third street, into three parcels. The home proposed as a bed and breakfast inn has been purchased by Nicholas and Audrey Tourmillon from Greenwich, Ct., city officials said Tuesday.

The couple wants to operate the establishment with four or five guest bedrooms. A "special exception" is required to run such an operation in an area zoned R-1 residential.

Breeden said there is no reason for the city to approve the exception, "but there are strong reasons not to do so."

"The area is a prime residential area of top quality homes and should not be damaged by such a commercial operation," Breeden wrote.

Breeden said if the city allows the operation, it would be "difficult if not impossible to refuse future applications."

He also said he wants to develop 12 acres he owns in the area into "the finest residential subdivision in Bay St. Louis. The proposed commercial operation would negatively impact, if not stop such plans to the detriment of all of Bay St. Louis."

At its last meeting, the Planning and Zoning Commission recommended approval of a bed and breakfast establishment at 115 Washington St., if six off-street parking spaces were provided.

But the applicant for that operation, Mike Zuppardo, told City Council later he wasn't sure he could safely accommodate six cars on the property and may withdraw his request. Council deferred action on the request until its Aug. 9 meeting.

The city has approved a total of three bed and breakfast establishments, including inns on North Beach Boulevard, Union Street, and Blue Meadow Road. Council rejected plans for a bed and breakfast in the Cedar Point area of North Beach Boulevard.

Chamber

based on recommendations from the primary funding sources. The Chairman of the Board will be selected by the Chamber President, currently Ellis Cuevas, Sea Coast Echo publisher.

The chairman, according to the agreement, will select the board members from the Chamber membership. The chamber president shall also serve as an ex-officio member of the Tourism Board.

The primary funding sources, as revealed at the news conference, will include the cities of Bay St. Louis and Waveland, the Hancock County Board of Supervisors, and Casino Magic and the Jubilee Casino.

Lady said the bureau will also apply for state grants.

"We hope to have a proposal (for state grants) ready for the first quarter of next year," Lady said.

The revenues shall be channeled through the general operating account of the Chamber and then disbursed to the Tourism Development Bureau's dedicated account as specified by the contributor.

Lady said when the funds are available, a full-time director will also be hired.

"Harrison County is also willing to work with us," he said. "Working together is really the way to go."

The agreement is a marriage that seemed improbable as late as April. During a joint meeting at the Jubilee, it was apparent the two sides were split on several issues, the most notable being the autonomy of a tourism director.

Chamber officials wanted the position to fall under the auspices of the Chamber. T&G officials had presented a proposal for a separate tourism department funded by the cities, county and casinos.

Lady said eventually it was in the best interest to jump on board with the Chamber.

"We feel like all things can be worked out," he said. "We have a lot in this county to sell. The best way to do it was (in accord) with the Chamber."

Several previous press conferences before Tuesday had been postponed as officials were trying to work out the final details.

Cuevas was unable to attend because of illness.

Clementine exhibit opens at Stennis Space Center

An exhibition of photographic images, taken by the Naval Research Laboratory (NRL) spacecraft Clementine on its mapping mission to the moon, will be on display at the John C. Stennis Space Center's Visitors Center July 28 through Sept. 17.

The photographs, both in color and black and white, are dramatic. A large suite of three 39" x 60" full color images, the focus of the exhibition, shows the sun rising over the rim of the moon, highlighting the earth, Venus and other planets.

A second suite of five images in black and white are matted in black and white to give a harlequin appearance to the wall. Still another shows the blue jewel of earth with the African continent clearly visible suspended over the cratered, barren surface of the moon.

The mission, developed by NRL, consists of 38 images ranging from the first conceptual drawing on a napkin of the mission components to a complete photo mosaic of the moon. The concept for the mission was initiated and supported financially by the Ballistic Missile Defense Organization. Partners in the project besides NRL were Lawrence Livermore National Laboratory, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and many private industrial contributors.

The spacecraft was placed in final lunar mapping orbit on Feb. 21, 1994 at 7:15 a.m. EST. In lunar orbit, Clementine circled the moon every five hours and, over the course of approximately 70 days, mapped the entire surface of the moon using ultraviolet, visible- and infrared-spectrum cameras.

The images returned by Clementine were the first high-resolution images of the moon collected since the Apollo lunar landing in 1972. Clementine left lunar orbit in early May 1994 after amassing a collection of 1.8 million lunar images.

Clementine was a "fast-track" program from its inception. NRL's work on Clementine began in March 1992, just 22 months before the January 1994 launch. This is less than half the time usually required to build a spacecraft like

NASA egg study hopes to hatch new information

What can bird lovers and conservationists everywhere learn from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration? The answer may lie in the results of the second phase of a joint research effort between NASA and the George M. Sullivan Avian Research Center in Bartlesville, Okla., in which a scientist from NASA's John C. Stennis Space Center (SSC) is using space-age technology to monitor the temperature of American Bald Eagle eggs.

The first phase of this project began in May 1993 when NASA's Jim Anderson used equipment based on advanced technology to monitor the temperature of chicken eggs being incubated in the nest by hens.

According to Anderson, "The goal of the initial research was to validate the technique of using our instrumentation to take temperature measurements by experimenting with a bird that has been studied extensively in the past."

Anderson set out to use the device to determine just how a hen adjusts the temperature of her eggs throughout the 21-day incubation period and to compare the numbers they obtained from the device to the results of other research using more classic temperature measurement techniques such as thermocouples (metal thermoelectric devices), radio transmitters, etc. The temperatures obtained from both methods should agree if everything is working well.

"The completed results were very informative, and everyone was extremely pleased," he said. "It showed that the device could be used to make the measurements and confirmed the fact that the developing embryo is capable of generating heat."

Based on the success of the first phase of the research, the equipment was set up in April at the Sutton Center, this time to monitor the natural incubation of two eggs of an American Bald Eagle throughout their 35-day incubation period.

Over 360 video tapes were collected, representing more than 700 hours of temperature information.

The specialized camera, similar in operation to a conventional camcorder, was pointed directly at the eagle nest from eight feet away and gave researchers the capability to measure eggshell temperature from a distance. This is the crux of remote sensing — making measurements from a distance without any physical contact with the item being measured.

This is a very important aspect of the research, according to Anderson. "Had we attached thermocouples directly to the eggs, the adult birds would be likely to inadvertently break the eggs by getting tangled in the lead wires, or may have abandoned the nest altogether. And since research with endangered and threatened species is very limited with respect to what can and can't be done, our knowledge of these species is likewise limited."

Using the device, known as an imaging radiometer, black and white images of the exposed eggs were obtained throughout the incubation cycle each time the parent bird rose off of them. Anderson likened the device to the one used to produce the monster's vision in the movie Predator, where the alien actually "saw" the temperature of objects as it looked at them.

"In our data, colder areas appear darker in the image, while hotter spots appear lighter," he explained.

But the data gathered by the infrared camera can also be used to determine other things as well, such as the number of times the incubating parent got off the eggs, how long the eggs were uncovered, etc.

This is very important information to avian researchers. "The research community is pretty excited about this. It's a perfect application of the technology and skills being developed within the agency to problems that, at first glance, appear to have little to do with the agency's mission. But in fact, Earth resources observation is one of NASA's core missions," said Anderson, who works in SSC's Earth Observation Research Office.

The next step in the research is to take the raw video data and analyze it using a PC-based system. This is when the temperatures are actually determined. Then, by noting the preferred temperatures that the parent birds are trying to maintain, in addition to fluctuations in eggshell temperatures when the parent got off the eggs for brief periods, avian biologists will have a better sense of what the eggs required, and thus should be able to develop artificial incubation techniques that more closely match the conditions found in the wild.

"Stennis Space Center has the exciting capability to perform end-to-end research," Anderson said. "In this project, we will use our optics and calibration systems laboratory to perform measurements of certain properties of the eggshells, measurements that are required in order for us to accurately determine the eggshell temperatures."

The equipment that will be used to make the measurements is normally used to maintain and calibrate the sensor systems flown on the Learjet for other studies.

"This is a perfect example of the synergy that exists between groups at SSC. What the engineers are using to perform their jobs, the scientists can also make use of," he said. "And in the end, everyone benefits."

Anderson was also excited about potential spinoff benefits to other species.

"Hopefully, using temperature data obtained in this fashion, wildlife conservationists will be able to better mimic Mother Nature and improve the success rate for artificially incubated eggs of other species, such as the Andean Condor, Cape Vulture and Ferruginous Hawk, to name a few," he said.

To demonstrate the broad applicability of the technique, he is currently working with faculty of the zoology department of the University of Oklahoma at Norman, applying this technique to thermoregulation studies involving the collard lizard.

The original idea for the avian research came about in discussions between scientists working on cooperative research among NASA, Mississippi State University and the U.S. Navy.

The groups jointly studied the distribution of marine mammals in a portion of the Gulf of Mexico. The imaging radiometer was mounted on a light observation aircraft and provided real-time water surface temperatures during flights. The data gathered is being used to help determine if marine life shows a preference for certain temperatures.

Mexican Elvis and others perform at opening of international conference

Elvis impersonators have become so common in American culture that they could soon replace apple pie as an icon. "I am Elvis: A Guide to Elvis Impersonators" listed almost 100 official acts in 1991, and who knows how many more have since donned turquoise-studded suits, and taken to lip-twitching, hip-swinging, brow-sweating outcries of rock and roll.

To stay ahead of the pack of "hound dogs," Elvis impersonators try new angles, twists and gimmicks. For Robert Lopez of Los Angeles, meeting the challenge was as easy as uno, dos, tres.

Lopez embroidered the Virgin of Guadalupe on the back of his requisite white jumpsuit, hired some beehive-adorned back-up singers (Priscilla, Gladysita, Lisa Marie and Que Linda Thompson) and coined the tune "You Ain't Nothin' But a Chiquaqua." Voila, instant El Vez!

El Vez is bringing his act — with all its silver lame, patent leather and matching sombrer-os — to the University of Mississippi Aug. 6 to open the 1995 International Conference on Elvis Presley, which is sponsored by the Center of the Study of Southern Culture and the Department of English.

The 3 p.m. opening in Fulton Chapel is being billed as a "Gospel Revival Singing," and will give music lovers a taste of Elvis-era performers, "Tate-mouth" Moore, Queen Elizabeth Weeden, The Earl White International Gospel Revue, Black Elvis, Young'n Old Elvis, and El Vez. The concert is free to conference participants and $10 for others.

Although El Vez performs some literal Spanish translations of the King's hits like "Hurraches Azules" ("Blue Suede Shoes") and "Viva La Raza" ("Viva Las Vegas"), El Vez alters some songs to fit his own Latino and social agenda.

"I'm caught in a trap, I can't walk out/Because my foot's caught in the border fence/Why can't you see, Statue of Liberty/I am your homeless, tired and weary/We can't grow on together, It's immigration time."

These are the opening lyrics of "Immigration Time," his salsa-style spin-off of "Suspicious Minds," which he backs up with horns, violins and a mariachi band. And in "En el Barrio," ("In the Ghetto"), El Vez takes a tongue-in-cheek look at inner-city crime as he sings: "Out of East L.A. With no more gangs and no more crime/To the promised land/Out in Anaheim — Near Disneyland."

Using his multicultural Elvis as a point of reference, El Vez speaks to society at large about social causes from the homeless to gangs. He believes that Elvis, a person who climbed out of poverty to become one of the most successful entertainers in the world, signified an American dream that is fair game to anyone. For these political ideas, El Vez has been called the most intelligent Elvis impersonator to date, a fitting — although dubious — honor.

With rings on his fingers and a pencil-thin mustache under his nose, El Vez began his career in 1988 after the art gallery he curated on Melrose Avenue in Los Angeles had an Elvis folk art exhibit. Several Elvis impersonators performed at the opening-night show, and while Lopez watched, he was moved to join the ranks of the hunk-a-burnin' wanna-bes.

Lopez made a pilgrimage to Memphis for Weep Week (the activities surrounding the candlelight vigil of Elvis' death), and consequently entered the annual Elvis impersonator competition at a nightclub near Graceland, Elvis' home. And the rest is history. No stranger to the stage, he previously performed with two southern California punk-era bands.

El Vez has been featured in Rolling Stone, The Wall Street Journal, the Chicago-Sun Times, Los Angeles Times, Life, The New Yorker and People, among others. He has toured the United States and Europe with his band, the Memphis Mariachis, which includes his back-up singers, the Elvettes.

The performer also offers a full product line from compact discs to the El Vez lock of hair backed on a color photo that is signed and dated by his barber.

Following the Aug. 6 musical extravaganza, the Honeymoon Garner Trio will perform at a reception at Southside Gallery at 5:30 p.m. The reception is free to conference participants and $25 for others. To purchase concert or reception tickets using VISA or MasterCard, call the Ole Miss Central Ticket Office at (601) 232-7411.

The 1995 International Conference on Elvis Presley, "In Search of Elvis: Music, Religion, Art, Performance," will examine a wide array of topics in American popular music and culture.

The six-day conference, Aug. 6-11, will explore new methods and issues for the study of Southern culture, American culture, modernity and post-modernity through the creative examination of all that intersect with the life, career, name and phenomenon of Elvis.

Upholstered furniture conference to be held

Mississippi residents involved with or interested in the furniture industry are invited to attend an upholstered furniture conference "Working with Foam, Fiber and Fabric" scheduled for Aug. 1-2 in Tupelo.

Registration for the event will begin at 7:30 a.m. Aug. 1 at The Executive Inn in Tupelo. Cost for the seminar is $150 per person or $130 per person if two or more persons attend from the same company.

Registration fees include conference sessions and materials, breakfast both days and lunch on the first day of the seminar. The event is scheduled to conclude at noon Aug. 2. Hotel reservations are not included in the registration fee.

Numerous furniture industry experts will discuss topics ranging from the uses of foam in furniture to an update on flammability regulations for upholstered furniture.

The conference is sponsored by the Mississippi State University Furniture Research Unit in the Forest Products Laboratory, the American Furniture Manufacturers Association and the Polyurethane Foam Association.

Travel Affiliates branches to Laurel and Hattiesburg

Travel Affiliates, the Coast's largest and oldest travel agency, just got bigger. The company has purchased controlling interest in Associated Travel Agency Inc. of Laurel, which has a branch office in Hattiesburg.

The purchase brings Travel Affiliates' total number of agency locations to seven and increases travel sales to more than $12 million annually.

Rae Anne Ryan, a certified travel counselor, and Hancock County businessman Edmond Fahey purchased Hancock Travel Affiliates' five locations in 1993 and renamed the agency. Associated Travel Agency is owned by building contractor H. Gordon Myrick Sr., formerly of Gulfport.

Ryan, Travel Affiliates' president, said, "Our companies were perfectly suited for this merger. Associated Travel is Laurel's largest and oldest travel agency."

She said Travel Affiliates' Cruises Only division, which specializes in cruise ship vacations, helped bring the two agencies together.

"Associated Travel Agency has wanted to expand its sale of cruise vacations," Myrick said. "To strengthen its position in vacation travel, Travel Affiliates' Cruises Only subsidiary is a powerful tool. Associated Travel's clients in Laurel and Hattiesburg will now have the prices and information that only sales volume can offer."

Ryan said cruising is the most rapidly expanding market in the travel industry, and that Cruises Only has sold more than $1 million in cruise vacations to more than 1,000 clients so far in 1995.

"We are breaking the records again this year for cruise and land vacations sales," she said. "The two million plus we did in 1994 is about to be passed in just the first seven months of this year." She predicted that expanding the market to Jones and Forrest counties could mean another $2 million in vacation sales over the next 12 months.

"Increasing sales of travel products like cruise ship vacations and packaged land tours are methods agencies are using to replace the lost revenues caused by the commission cap implemented by the seven major US airlines," Ryan said.

In the five years that Ryan has headed the company the emphasis has been on vacation travel. "High customer satisfaction and high yield of the vacation travel market," Ryan said, "has truly proven to be the right direction for the business."

Travel Affiliates has reduced its dependency on the sale of airline tickets from a high of 92 percent of gross sales in 1989 to less than 60 percent. "The scales are tipping in the right direction," she said.

Workshop offered for home sewing businesses

Home sewing industry educational representatives, along with Extension educators and business professionals, will participate in the program.

Specific areas to be covered include business management, marketing directions, current trends, and new technology in the area of sewing. Discussions will touch on business regulations, pricing, bookkeeping, advertising and new products.

Vacation Bible School Lutheran Church of the Pines

"Walking in His Footsteps" was the theme for the Lutheran Church of the Pines Vacation Bible School. Students numbered 78 with a staff of 19. The Bible students walked in Christ's footsteps from his youth to his death on the cross and his resurrection from the grave.

Guest Pastors, dancers, drama, films, visual displays and even an illusion demonstrated by a local magician all correlated to relate the Gospel message.

The Hancock Food Pantry and the Bethlehem Children's Treatment Center in New Orleans received contributions collected during Vacation Bible School. Over 150 non-perishable food items for the pantry was collected and over $140 was collected for the Children's Center.

The last day of Vacation Bible School was celebrated with certificates and a pizza party. The following Sunday was the Vacation Bible School closing which included teacher appreciation certificates, songs and dancing performed by the students.

Families and students were invited for a potluck supper immediately following the service. The school was enjoyable and successful experience for all participants.

Seventy-eight youngsters enjoyed the Vacation Bible School.

Drawings and visual displays helped in the Bible School.

Dances were performed correlating to the Gospel message.

Guest pastors explained the Gospel message to the students.

The theme of the Vacation Bible School was "Walking in His Footsteps."

Students take a moment for deep prayer.

Mississippi bass fishing a daunting experience

Professional bass angler Mickey Bruce recently fished a national tournament on the Mississippi River and describes the experience as "daunting and difficult."

"There is so much water it's overwhelming," says Bruce, a member of the Evinrude Outboards Pro Staff who has fished on other major rivers in his career but never on the Mississippi when it was several feet high.

"The first thing you do when fishing the Mississippi is to get off the main river itself and into one of the calmer backwater areas. Once you get into the sloughs and off-river lakes, the habitat begins to look more familiar."

Bruce fished out of Moline, Ill., located in Pool 15 of the river but motored about 60 miles upstream into Pool 13 to work a huge, shallow protected backwater.

"The key to fishing any large river system like this," he explains, "is looking first for places where bass can spawn. It has to be a large area that provides food and cover and which does not have a current that flows through it.

"If you find that type of area, you'll generally find bass. It's true on rivers throughout the United States, and especially on the Mississippi. It took nearly 50 pounds to win our tournament."

The Evinrude pro does not believe bass migrate in and out of the backwater areas on the Mississippi, primarily because the flow of the main river current is so strong.

"I don't think bass would ever leave a backwater area unless conditions absolutely forced them to," he says. "The bass are spawned in the shallow water of the backwaters and they never move very far away, which is why you go straight to these types of areas when you're looking for fish."

The Mississippi River backwaters Bruce fished extend for miles and include stumps, standing timber, and several types of vegetation. In addition, there are islands, bays, small channels and even lakes available for fishing.

13-15 stars win sectional

BY JOSEPH W. GEX II
The 13- to 15-year-olds fast-pitch girls softball team won the sectional tournament on July 25 to advance to the Divisional tournament that will be held in Leesville, Louisiana starting on Saturday, July 29.

This is the first time the girls softball team from this area has won the sectional tourney.

The girls played a double-header against Alabama on July 25 to secure the win, but not without some excitement. Tara Carrigee had a strong showing in the first game before Alabama won 6-5 in the bottom of the seventh. However, Tara Burrell and Amberly Bilbo came and shut down Alabama in the nightcap game as Mississippi defeated Alabama 16-6. The game was called in the fourth inning due to the 10-run rule.

The Mississippi girls lost only one game during the tournament. The teams that participated in the sectional tourney were from Mississippi, Louisiana, Alabama, and Arkansas.

The girls will face teams from Tennessee, Kentucky, and Georgia in the Divisional tournament. Mississippi will square off with Georgia on Saturday, July 29 at 7:30 p.m.

Competitions include video archery, big buck and duck calling.

Admission is $6 for adults and $3 for kids under 12.

Genna to continue rebuilding of Rocks

BY JOSEPH W. GEA II
As announced earlier, the St. Stanislaus Rock-a-chaws have a new head football coach in Coach Mario Genna. He has been an assistant coach for 16 years and now has the task of continuing to rebuild the Rock football program. He is married to the former Marcia Howard and has one son, Bobby, who is 11 years old.

Genna is a Coast native hailing from d'Iberville where he played high school football for the Warriors and under then-coach Buddy Singleton. He played for Singleton from 1971-74. Coach Genna played quarterback and defensive back for the Warriors.

Football was not his only love. He played and excelled in basketball, baseball and track.

After his high school playing days were completed at d'Iberville, he was offered a scholarship to play junior college football at Perkinson Junior College where he was a part of some strong teams. During his stint with the Bulldogs, they were ranked as the No. 1 junior college team in the nation for a period of weeks.

After Perkinson Junior College, he continued his college playing days at Delta State University in Cleveland, Mississippi. He was coached there by Robert McGraw who had some strong teams that competed in the Gulf South Conference on the Division II level.

At Delta State, Genna was used more as a punter rather than a quarterback. For the first four weeks of the 1976 season, he led the nation in punting average. However, Genna did not finish out his career playing football. He closed his playing days by throwing the javelin for Delta State.

Upon graduation, he traveled back down to the Coast and started coaching under his high school mentor Buddy Singleton at d'Iberville High School. Genna coached under Buddy Singleton for about eight years and then moved to Pascagoula High School. There he was the defensive line coach and in charge of the overall Weight Program at the school that tallied both athletes and non-athletes.

He coached at Pascagoula from 1988-90 and credits this program with teaching him what he knows about the defensive side of the ball. He states, "I was always an offensive-minded coach, but when I got to Pascagoula they wanted me to coach defense. However, the best opportunity I think I received there was that the coaching staff was invited to come down and run the Bobby Bowden Football camp at Florida State. There, we had some of the best coaches in the nation and some of the best athletes to work with. I gained a lot from that camp and working on Bill Matthews' staff."

Next, Genna took the head coaching job at Greene County and then bounced over to Harrison Central where he coached from 1990-92. After the 1992 season, Genna took the defensive coordinator position at Brookhaven High School and stayed there from 1992-93.

His most recent position has been at Picayune Memorial High School under Hal Holmes.

Coach Mario Genna describes himself as a very vocal coach, motivated, and excited about what he does. A first impression of Coach Genna leads him as a disciplinary-type coach with a very deep voice. He is a coach that wants excellence. He comments, "I am a teacher first and foremost. The practice field is my classroom and my test is Friday nights. Practice is supposed to be the hardest and Friday night is the easy part, because we have been studying all week."

Genna considers one of his biggest obstacles is gaining the confidence of his players. He states, "These senior boys have had three coaches in three years, and I have to get them to trust me. I want them to know that I am here for them and I'm busting my tail for them." Genna has moved into the community of Bay St. Louis for he feels that it is very important for the coach to be readily accessible if anything should happen.

Coach Genna states that the most vital part of his project here is to get the team 'over the hump.' Genna comments, "These seniors have been part of only one win in three years. I need to teach them how to get over the hump. We need to learn how to win. Once we can teach them that, one never knows what can happen."

He continues, "I think Coach LeBlanc has laid some excellent groundwork for that and now it is my turn to go with it and continue the rebuilding process. Brannon did an incredible amount of work here in his one year and it made my transition here a little easier. However, there is still quite a bit of work to do."

Coach Genna will run a version of the Wing-T which will emphasize finesse play and different sets. On defense he will run a Split-4 that will look like an 8-man front and a 3-deep secondary.

Genna states, "We will teach technique and fundamentals here. Each one of the boys has to realize that their job is as important as everyone else's. The team must come first for success."

Coach Stan Dellenger will handle the offense, and Coach Genna will handle the defense. Genna states, "I am a firm believer in a strong defense. If a team has a good defense and a good kicking game, then that puts you in a position to win. You don't want your offense to be faced with driving 80 yards every time for the score."

When asked about his transition to Bay St. Louis, Genna commented, "From what I can see in the players, community, and school, they are starving for a winning program, and I want to contribute to that. I am glad to be here at SSC and look forward to instilling a winner here."

I asked Coach Genna what he wanted to see in his players at the end of his season here at

Treatments can rid dogs of heartworms

By Dr. Wynn Jones
Veterinarian
MSU College of Veterinary Medicine

"Can heartworms in dogs be treated, and how involved is it? I have always been told putting the animal to sleep was the only solution."

Treatment is available for dogs with heartworm disease. The treatment itself is hard on a dog, and its success depends on the dog's physical status.

To treat heartworms, the first thing the veterinarian will do is to take a blood sample to check the dog's liver function and take chest X-rays to determine the severity of current changes in the heart and lung tissues.

After the dog is in the hospital, a drug is used twice a day for two days to kill the adult worms. During this time the dog must be kept quiet or confined for about four weeks after the adult worms have been killed.

It takes anywhere from seven to 17 days from the time of treatment for the worms to die. Within this time, dead worms will fragment and travel to the dog's lungs.

If there are many dead worms, some of the blood vessels to the lungs may become blocked. If the dog is kept quiet and only allowed to move around enough to go outside, the vessel blockage may not require attention.

But, if the dog is allowed to run around, the heart rate increases, and many dead worm fragments will travel to the lungs at the same time. This causes extensive lung damage.

Studies show less than 3 percent of dogs have complications if a dog is thoroughly examined and carefully treated by an attending veterinarian.

About four weeks after the initial drug has been given, the veterinarian will give the dog high dosages of ivermectin to kill remaining larvae that are circulating.

Treating heartworm disease is difficult and costly. But preventing the disease is quite simple. Talk with your veterinarian about how to prevent heartworms.

"My 10-month-old puppy is developing a habit of growling and acting fearful toward strangers. I try to reassure him and calm him down, which works for the moment but has no lasting change on his behavior. I don't know what has caused him to be this way. Is there any chance he can change?"

He can change, but you need to stop rewarding him for his inappropriate behavior. Soothing or reassuring your dog when he acts fearfully or aggressively is a classic mistake made by many pet owners.

By stroking him or speaking lovingly to him, you are reinforcing the aggressive behavior. Instead, say no sharply, and when he stops, praise him. If he allows his head to be petted, praise him even more.

If your dog is acting fearful, do not say no as sharply as when he is growling. Reprimand growling or aggressive behavior very sternly. That's why it is important to expose your puppy to a variety of social situations.

One way to do this is to take the puppy to different places. Try going to the park, shopping center, schools or even a different neighborhood. If the puppy seems afraid, let it explore by itself. Encourage the puppy, but be firm, not coaxing.

This allows the puppy to learn about the world without reacting fearfully to new situations or people when it is an adult. The puppy also is learning you will not ask him to do anything dangerous or harmful.

If you have questions concerning a pet's health, contact Dr. Wynn Jones, MSU/CVM, Box 9825, Mississippi State, MS 39762.

Program provides support for those who lose companion animals

The death of an animal can leave a void in the life of a family that is hard to fill. A support program at Mississippi State University is designed to help humans cope when they lose animals that have become close companions.

The "Companions" program is a joint venture between a doctoral student in the university's counselor education department and the College of Veterinary Medicine. Jackie Thomas, the program's founder, says it provides education and counseling services.

Thomas is conducting research on the human-animal bond with an emphasis on grief experienced by someone who loses a companion animal. She offers this advice on how to cope with such a loss:

* It's OK to grieve. Understand that close emotional bonds can develop between people and animals and that grieving the loss of a pet is normal. Also, he grieving process could last for several months or even longer.

* Talk about how you feel. Expressing your grief will make you feel better sooner. "In most cases, it is better to talk to people who have had pets because these people will probably be more understanding," Thomas says.

* Recognize the finality of your pet's death. "Having a farewell service to memorialize your lost companion animal can be positive, especially for children," recommends Thomas.

* If you are a friend of someone who has lost a companion animal, do not surprise them with another animal.

* Give children extra attention. "Children should be encouraged to ask questions and answers should be appropriate to their level of understanding," says Thomas.

* Don't hide the death of an animal from a child. Use the word "death" instead of euphemisms such as "put to sleep" or "taking a trip" when explaining death to children.

For information about counseling services and educational resources, contact Jackie Thomas by phone at (601) 325-1412 or by electronic mail at thomas@cvm.msstate.edu.

Arts Commission meeting slated

The Mississippi Arts Commission will hold its quarterly business meeting 1:30-3:15 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 22 on the second floor of the Robert E. Lee Building in Jackson. The meeting is open to the public.

Among its business, the Commission will ratify grant guidelines for FY 1996, budgets, incentive grants and local arts agencies residency planning grants.

For a meeting agenda, contact Kathryn Rodenmeyer, 601-359-6030.

Forestry Award nominees sought

Mississippi Forestry Association will present its first Youth Forestry Achievement Award at its October annual meeting in Jackson.

The annual award will recognize the outstanding Mississippi forestry youth between the ages of 13 and 18, and the winner will receive an expense-paid trip to the MFA annual meeting. Nominees will be judged on forestry achievement, leadership, citizenship and community service.

Nomination forms are available from Mississippi Forestry Association. Any person or organization is eligible to nominate candidates for the award, and nominations must be postmarked by Sept. 1.

Infant death rate declines

Public health initiatives like WIC and the Maternal/Child Health Block Grant helped push Mississippi's 1994 infant death rate to a record low, show figures the Mississippi State Department of Health released recently.

Still, 1994's record reflects one of the smallest drops in history and leaves Mississippi's rate too high, public health officials warned.

"Mississippi's rate really hasn't changed much in the past 10 years," said State Health Officer Ed Thompson, MD, MPH.

"We've reached a plateau much lower than the rates of previous decades, but climbing down from that level has proven tricky."

The state's infant mortality rate—the number of babies per 1,000 who die before they reach one year of age—fell slightly from 11.4 in 1993 to 10.9, according to the latest MSDH figures. That change was not statistically significant.

Since the early 1970s, Mississippi's infant mortality rate has spiraled downward. This year, almost 800 babies who would have died to decades ago instead will live.

But those declining numbers began to level in 1988. Since then, the state's infant mortality rates have fluctuated between 12.3 and 1994's all-time low of 10.9.

"When dealing with health care issues, our society places much of its trust in high tech gadgets," Thompson said. "In reality, simple prevention methods—like providing good nutrition for infants and early prenatal care for mothers—make the healthiest impact on our lives. That's what we mean when we talk about going back to the old-time public health philosophy."

Public health efforts to prevent infant mortality include the Maternal/Child Health Block Grant, which helps Mississippi provide more than half the state's prenatal care to mothers who couldn't get it elsewhere.

The Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants and Children—commonly called WIC—has provided nutrition and nutrition education to women and children since 1972, when Mississippi's infant mortality rate towered near 27 deaths for every 1,000 births.

A U.S. General Accounting Office study shows WIC saves $4.16 in medical costs for every $1 invested.

Both programs operate on federal funds administered through the State Department of Health.

"Today, our infant mortality rate stands miles below the rates of any other decade," Thompson said. "But much of that accomplishment came about through strong federal support."

Public health staffs also work at local levels statewide with private providers to assure planned hospital delivery close to home, tailored to the risk of the mother and infant. They cooperate to continue care after delivery, particularly including family planning and infant health services.

The latest infant mortality figure includes a rate of 7.3 for white babies, down from 8.4 in 1993, and a 14.8 rate among non-white infants, up from 14.6 the previous year.

Non-white infant mortality rates nationwide generally rank twice as high as the rates among white infants.

Nationally, public health officials are striving to reduce America's infant mortality rate to no more than seven deaths for every 1,000 live birth by the year 2000.

Crapemyrtles achieve flowering recognition

By Dr. Milo Burnham
Horticulturist
Mississippi Cooperative
Extension Service

Crapemyrtle is probably the second most popular flowering shrub planted in Mississippi. Azaleas may lead in popularity. While some gardeners consider crapemyrtle a small tree and not a shrub, some crapemyrtle cultivars get no taller than 3 feet.

Fortunately, azaleas and crapemyrtles aren't competitive in the landscape. Azaleas bloom in spring and do well in shade while crapemyrtles bloom in summer and need full sun.

Regardless of whether crapemyrtle is a shrub or small in Mississippi Gardens

tree or first or second in popularity, it is an ideal plant for Mississippi landscapes. Crapemyrtles thrive in Mississippi from the Tennessee border to the Gulf of Mexico.

One of the crapemyrtle cultivar development centers in the United States is at the National Arboretum in Washington, D.C. Surprisingly, North Mississippi and Washington, D.C., both are in plant hardiness zone 7, the zone with an average minimum winter temperature between 0 and 10 degrees Fahrenheit.

Spring is an ideal time to plant crapemyrtles in the landscape. They aren't sensitive about soil type, but grow best in well-drained, fertile soils. They require full sun for good summer flowering and development of colorful leaves in the fall.

Crapemyrtles truly are plants for all seasons of the year. Even when covered with green leaves without flowers, as they are in spring, they are attractive in the landscape. Flowering begins in late spring and early summer and continues for several weeks.

The leaves turn to shades of red and yellow in the fall. In winter and early spring the leafless trunks and limbs provide interesting patterns in the landscape, and the peeling bark creates colorful patterns.

Crapemyrtle flower colors range from pure white through varying shades of pink to the deepest reds. There are also light and dark lavenders and some two-time flowers. Growers can keep cultivars which begin to bloom in late May and early June in flower until late summer by timely removal of the faded flower clusters. This encourages new flower clusters to develop. Crapemyrtles flower on new growth, and pruning and fertilization are important to stimulating this growth. Large, old, neglected crapemyrtles that grow very little each year may have few if any flowers.

Gardeners who want to control the size of crapemyrtles or who want to prune the plant to promote new growth should cut plants in early or midspring — just before new growth begins. Avoid pruning, especially substantial cutting back, in the late summer through winter months.

Among the many different crapemyrtle cultivars available at garden centers are a group developed at the National Arboretum. They are resistant to powdery mildew, the most serious disease pest of crapemyrtles. Their names are Acoma, Apalachee, Biloxi, Hopi, Lipan, Miami, Muskogee, Natchez, Osage, Pecos, Sioux, Tuscarora, Tuskegee, Wichita, Yuma and Zuni.

These new crapemyrtles have white, pink or lavender flowers, depending on the cultivar. The plants when mature range in height from 7 to 30 feet and in shape from low and spreading to tall and broad.

Crapemyrtles planted close to your home may color clash with the brick or painted siding when they come into bloom. To prevent this from happening, wait until later in the year when they are blooming and you can select a color to compliment your home.

Gardeners can plant crapemyrtles grown in nursery cans and larger plants that are balled and burlapped almost any time of the year.

Mouse to visit library for special story hour

If a hungry little traveler shows up at your house, you might want to give him a cookie. If you give him a cookie, he's going to ask for a glass of milk. He'll want to look in a mirror to make sure he doesn't have a milk mustache, and then he'll ask for a pair of scissors to give himself a trim.

The consequences of giving a cookie to this energetic mouse run the host ragged, but young readers will come away smiling at the antics that tumble like dominoes through the pages of the delightful picture book, If

You Give A Mouse A Cookie.

And the mouse from this book will be visiting the Bay St. Louis-Hancock County Library on Friday, July 28, at 10 a.m., and at the Pass Christian Library at 11:30 a.m. Sponsored by the two libraries, Bookends Bookstore and the Kid Company, the program is free and open to children of all ages.

Mississippi produces record blueberry crop

Improved efficiency, favorable weather and new technology contributed to a record-breaking blueberry harvest for Mississippi producers this year.

Mississippi blueberry producers who are members of the Miss-Lou Blueberry Growers Association harvested 2 million pounds of blueberries during the state's prime harvesting period. Harvesting of about 1,000 acres began in May and continued until the second week of July, with most varieties finished by July 4.

Dr. John Braswell, extension horticulture specialist in Poplarville, said these figures do not account for the additional 500 acres of blueberries in the state from which grower market to local stores and roadside stands.

Association members posted a 1.57 million pound blueberry crop in Mississippi in 1994.

This year's record-breaking yields will provide consumers with 1.05 million pounds of fresh blueberries and 1 million pounds of frozen blueberries. The previous record was more than 1.66 million pounds of blueberries harvested in 1992.

Prices for fresh berries have remained steady for the past eight years, with an average of $12 a flat. One flat is measured as about 10 pounds or 12 points of fresh berries.

"Prices have been fantastic this year," said Jerry Hutto, co-owner of Amber's Blueberry Farm in Wayne County. "Producers like the prices to remain stable."

Hutto received more than $12 a flat from his 32,000 pounds of berries harvested from 6 acres of marketable plants.

The favorable weather conditions throughout the growing season and the dry weather during harvest helped producers achieve these record yields. Also, as the blueberry plants age, yield per plant increases.

"The good weather growers experienced this year helped tremendously with the record harvest," Hutto said. "Last year we had a lot of rain which hurt yields."

New technology and improved efficiency also played key roles in Mississippi's record blueberry harvest.

"Growers are becoming more efficient and are using new technology and mechanical harvesting equipment which have helped them increase their harvest volume," Braswell said.

Profit margins will increase as use of mechanical harvesters and mechanical grading speeds up the process of preparing berries for market.

"Mechanical harvesting costs producers about 8 cents a pound compared to 30 cents a pound for hand-picked," Braswell said.

Midges caused limited damage in some areas of the state, but no crops were destroyed. Midges have not been a problem for Mississippi producers in past years.

"Producers will need to be on the lookout for midge damage next spring," Braswell said. "Midge problems result after mild winter weather in the blueberry producing areas of Mississippi."

The newest addition to the blueberry industry in Mississippi is the Nature's Wonders processing plant located in Collins. The blueberry processing plant which began business in June houses the latest equipment for processing both fresh and frozen fruit.

Dean Daughdrill, president of Nature's Wonders, said in their first year of production the plant averaged 10,000 pounds of fresh and frozen fruit processed a day.

"Nature's Wonders saw the need for a processing plant in a central location for Mississippi's smaller volume producers who did not have their own processing equipment," Daughdrill said.

"We were able to meet the needs of many blueberry producers and hope this year's success will encourage others to give us the opportunity to do their custom processing work."

COOKING UP A STORM

By Katy McGuire Caire

Blueberries

We went blueberrying a couple of Sundays ago, Bill and I, when we stopped at one of the "pick-your-own" blueberry farms in the Covington-Mandeville area on the north shore of Lake Pontchartrain.

I was enjoying a weekend visit with my son Bill and daughter-in-law Roi McGuire at their home in Mandeville, as well as seeing son Jack and daughter-in-law Sue McGuire, when we decided to go blueberry-picking.

Within the next half hour or so, we had filled our pails and were greedily anticipating the delicious treats we would soon savor from our hand-picked crop.

There are so many delicious ways to use these berries, which range from a purplish hue to blue-black, and are delicious, of course, eaten out of hand, or tumbled over ice cream or frozen yogurt, or in a pie or tart, as well as in muffins or pancakes or waffles.

I like also to top cheesecake with sour cream and blueberries. And I like blueberry cobbler and blueberry dumplings, old-fashioned dishes. And, I especially like that "old-time" dish:

BLUEBERRY CRISP

4 cups blueberries
1 tsp. grated lemon rind
3/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar

1/2 cup all-purpose flour
1/4 tsp. ground cinnamon
1/4 cup butter or margarine, softened

Place the berries in a shallow baking dish or, if you prefer, a deep dish pie pan (9-inch) and sprinkle with the lemon rind.

Blend together the sugar, flour, cinnamon and butter or margarine. Sprinkle over the berries, and bake in a preheated moderate oven (375 degrees) for 25 minutes, a bit more if needed.

Serve warm, this way, or top with vanilla ice cream or frozen peach or other flavor yogurt. (6 servings)

For a tasty, versatile topping for pancakes, French toast, crepes, or frozen yogurt, here's a new recipe from the "Arizona Heart Institute Foundation Cookbook — A Renaissance of Good Eating" (Phoenix, Ariz):

BLUEBERRY TOPPING

1 Tbsp. cornstarch
1/3 cup firmly packed brown sugar
2 Tbsp. lemon juice
1/4 cup water
2 cups fresh or frozen blueberries
